Leave your preconceived ideas on parenting and discipline at the door! If you've ever wanted to master the ability to bring more peace and cooperation to your home or classroom, this course is for you. This 9-hour parenting course is designed to help adults understand why misbehavior occurs and offers a solid, step-by-step discipline plan that includes reactive steps when misbehavior occurs and proactive techniques to use when it's not. Participants will learn:

- The 5 foundational concepts of discipline
- The 4 basic skills every parent needs for raising cooperative kids
- The 8 life skills your child must learn to live a happy life
- And more!

Additional principles covered include teaching children responsibility, handling power struggles, and creating consequences that work. Whether you've taken Bill's training in the past or have heard about his training events, you'll want to experience his NEW and comprehensive course that will take you beyond any other parenting course or book. A recent graduate of the "Love, Limits, and Lessons" course said, "Other parenting courses I have taken before was like getting a wonderful box of tools, but Bill's new course gave me a plan, a manual for my child, and the formula I needed for raising a child who will cooperate now and achieve his dreams as an adult!" Come and learn how a different approach on discipline can change your life, your children, and your family. Discipline shouldn't be just about creating cooperative kids, Bill's program is about using it in a way to build their internal compass that will point to true north for their moral values, self control, and hearing the calling within.

ABOUT THE INSTRUCTOR: Bill Corbett is the author of this course and founder of Cooperative Kids. He is a member of the American Psychological Association (APA), the National Children's Alliance (NCA), and the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC). Bill has a degree in psychology from University of Phoenix and his syndicated column on discipline appears in many parenting publications around the country. He has three adult children and two grandchildren and lives with his wife Elizabeth in Enfield, Connecticut. Learn more about Bill at www.CooperativeKids.com.
